

Literary geography

Literary Geographies is an interdisciplinary open-access e-journal that provides a forum for new research and collaboration in the field of literary/geographical studies. The journal features work combining topics and methods from literary studies, cultural geography, cartography, and spatial theory. In human and cultural geographies, fictive literature, novels, and poems have been used in different manners for over a century. In the early years, literature was often used to add aesthetic nuances to geographic descriptions or, slightly paradoxically, to function as a database for separating fact from fiction.
