

Traditional Fishing Boats of Britain and Ireland

Groomsport yawl Lissey, c. 1901.

There are still a few Ballyhack yawls in this small village on the east side of Waterford Harbour, though today's are motorised whereas the original yawls were gaff rigged. These transom-sterned half-deckers were fished in the main for herring and mackerel, though some set lobster pots according to John Carroll, whose family had been building them at their yard alongside the harbour there. In the back of the yard is one of the oldest yawls, the Star of the Sea, which John hopes one day to restore. Either that or build an original yawl.
